For Detective Finney of Pittsburg, But With Assistance of Chief Rottler Arrest Was Made Last Night. Two Sets of Children.

Alone in her spartments on Cedar-avenue, Mrs. Victor Sipes has the ruthless knowledge with her that her husband was suddenly taken from her side during the night by police offi-cers, and in far away Armstrong coun-ty, near Butler, another Mrs. Victor Sines received word that the snonse who deserted her months ago had been made a prisoner in the Connellsville police station and was started home this morning in company with J. J. Finney, one of Pitisburg's cleverest detectives.

Sines was avrested last night shortly before 11 o'clock after having been under surveillance for several days. Delective Finney arrived here yesterday afternoon and, with the assistance of Chief of Police Rottler lined up his man. At the first call at the apartment house, owned by Peter Rutsek, on Cedar avenue, the much married husband was not at home, and the wife, with her three weeks' old child; was undisturbed. The next trip the om hers made they believed their man was there. When they entered he was found in bed, wooing the sleep of the just. Sipes was take on from the house as quietly as possible and placed behind the bars of the local police station, from where he will be, started on his journey, to the Butler jail this morning on the Duquesne. There are charges of desertion and non support already against him, and he must an swer to an additional charge of

amy. The search for Sipes started after his jumping a bail bond under which he was held to appear at the September term of the Armstrong county courts to answer to the charges of desertion and non-support. The search for Sipes was a prolonged one and Detective Finney traveled into various parts of Western Penn-sylvania in search of him. He had in his possession a stack of letters six inches thick, that had been passed over the country between police offiers and private detective bureaus rearding the wherentouts of Sipes, but they always proved elusive. Sipes carried on a unique system of correspondence. When working in Con-nellsville the officers felt assured that he was either employed at Tyrone or Johnstown, but search there always falled. At last suspicion was directed to persons in New Haven, and this is how his arrest came about.

It is alleged that Sipes' first wife has been married to him for years and there are three children who call him father. Family disagreements resulted in a rupture and finally Sipes left home. The first proceedings against him were charges of desertion and non-support Sines gave bail for his appearance in court and disappeared.

Sipes, according to the police record, came to Connellarille July 15 and with him brought a wife. This woman is supposed to be Mary Weisgorber of Washington, D. C. She is a woman of refinement and said to be of an excellent family. The officers consider her a person of more than ordinary attainments and be-lieve that she has been deluded by Sipes. Of the arrest last night they gave her little information. A child was born to her three weeks ago. She declares that she was regularly married to Sipes, who says she is his

West Penn officials are never idle, and the latest scheme that has been evolved from their thinking machines is a shortening of the distance between Connellsville and Uniontown. This new route will make the operation of a strictly 40 minute schedule possible and that is what the company desires in these days of competition against the two cent railway fare.

Engineers of the company have man ped out a route from Connellsville via South Coanellsville, across the Yough river to Fayette, cutting out the grades Practically every Western Pennsylvania lumber dealer, particularly line that runs via Wheeler. FAMOUS PEOPLE

McIan Studio, New York

MRS. CYNTHIA W. ALDEN'S LIFE OF USEFULNESS

I F individual greatness be measured by the degree of one's unselfish helpfulness to the world, Mrs. Cynthla Westover Alden, President-General of the International Sunshine Society, and one of the best known club women in America, deserves high place on the roll of contemporary fame.

As a motherless shild of four she was taken by her father, Oliver S. Westover, an expert mineralogist, from their home in Iowa to the wild believe, an expert mineralogist, from their home in Iowa to the wild be father, studied under his loving tutorship, geology and history and the broader teachings of Nature, in the great wild open-alrectical, where she hapdied a rifle, a lariat, and the bow and arrow at about the age when girls have hardly put aside their doils. have hardly put aside their dolls.

hapdied a rine, a lariet, and the new and arrow at about the age when giris have hardly put astietithet doils.

Those were dangerous days when she and her father seven times made the trip over the Rockies, where savage Indians hidding in the tail grass or behind rocks in the phisses, made life a terror to the whites. She had beroic courage and a hunger to help humanity, which she now reveals in simpler and more conventional ways. She crawled through the grass to bathe and bind the wounds of their driver who had been scalped by the Indians; saved n miner from lynching by stepping bravely between the victim and an angry mob; was lowered over a preclipie to bring up the dead body of a child; threw herself on a lighted lamp that had been dropped near gunpowder; killed a black bear that attacked her; kept a pack of force coyotes at bay with a stick in her hand and rescued a number of snow-bound miners.

At seventeen she was managing a district school at Boulder, Colorado, and shortly afterward graduated from the State University. She sang for some years as a church soprano in New York and later acted as inspector of customs where her fibeney in German, Italian, French and Spanish proved of great value as they also did in her splendld work in journalism and many other lines of activity.

Her Sunshine Society with more than 200,000 mer; bers all over the world. her summine Soujers with more than 200,000 members all over the world, is devoted to spreading sweetness and sunsbine, to making the world day by day happier and brighter by acts of kindness and love. It makes Christianity practical not an occasional impulse, but a continuous, pervading atmosphere of the radiation of good. The God's truth of the matter is that the manufacturers of America taken as a whole, have been more truthful than the manufacturers abroad. The filthiest packing house in this country never in its worse days compared in filthiness with the althy packing houses of Europe. The Department of Agriculture is prepared to prove that any time any repre sentative of any foreign governmen here, or elsewhere, undertakes to de ny the accuracy of a statement put out from the department, in a semiofficial manner, in which that assertion was made

The only difference between European governments and our own to that our government and our people think it a public duly to reveal a rottenness wherever it exists. In Eng-land, in particular, places where foods are prepared are abominably filthy, yet the British government officials and the British press have professed to be shocked beyond measure by the revelations concerning conditions in canning and packing establishments n this country.

For instance, Secretary Wilson de-cided that if any cane sugar or cane molasses was added to maple sugaor maple molasses that the compound is not "pure" maple sugar or molas ses. He has also decided that a mix ture of potato and cassava starch is not pure cassava starch.

It has been inconceivable to Secre inry Wilson that manufacturers would seriously contend for the privilege of misbranding their waves, but his ex-perience is that they will not only do it but will feel aggrieved because he will not see that it is perfectly harm-less to do so. The manufacturers reason that if a deception does not work harm to the bealth of the con-sumer the deception is not to be for-bidden. That is not the intent of the law. The intent is to enable the con-sumer to know at a glance at the conialner what he is buying. He is pre-sumed to know whether what he is buying is healthful or deleterious. All the government seeks to do is to as sure him a square deal.

Some doped foodstaffs have been put out of business. A noted break-tast food and a brand of gloger snaps that always retained the freshness of recent manufacture are on the fist The freshness was secured by the acdition of glycerine. Many kinds o expansive candies are kept fresh in the same way. But if those candies are to be shipped from one State to are to be supped from the state to another, they have got to be labeled dangerous—poleon. Of course that will put them out of business. The manufacturers have been able to sell them simply because the consumer did not know that glycerine had been used for preserving them in a fresh condition.

But the man who says the pure food law has made it necessary to increase prices is a liar. The most it has compelled any manufacturer to do is to fult selling poison under the pretense that it is food. The least it has compelled any to do is to tell the truth with regard to the lagredients with which he has made the food he places in inter-State trade.

To Ritter I pretended to know nothing of the re-turn of the drawings or how they had been stolen—the only things I did know with certainty. But I did pro-tend to know all about Mirsky—or Hunter—when, as a matter of fact, I knew nothing at all, except that he probably went under more than one name. That put Ritter into my bands completely. When he found the game was up, he began with a lying confession. Believing that the tracings were still in the stick and that we knew nothing of their return, he said that they had not been away, and that he would fetch them—as I had expected he would. I let him to for them alone, and when he returned, uttorly broken up by the discovery that they were not there. I had him altogether at my mercy. - PINKIE PRIM -

One day unto a chum's house Did Pinkie go to play. Sev'ral others with her went, Around the kitchen way.

Because the day was muddy, Some rubbed their shoes with sticks. The chum, though, merely scraped hers Upon the backyard bricks.

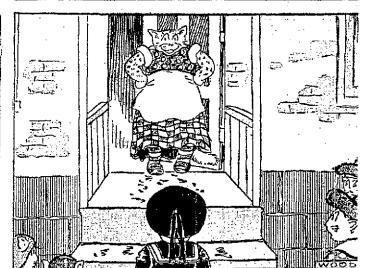

"O, hurry up, girls!," cried she: And opened up the door. Then all the girls but Pinkie Went traipsing cross the floor.

"Get out of here!," cried Norah, Who'd just a-scrubbing been.
"To dirty up a clean floor so,
With muddy feet's a sin!"

As North chased the girls out, Abrandishing her mop, She saw a sight most pleasing, That brought her to a stop.

"Arrah!" cried she. "See Pinkie! Her feet are nice and clean! She's used the mat and scraper. Ah! She's the dear colleen!"
